

Quality, environmental and occupational health and safety policy.

The Eugin Group's member centres undertake to continuously improve quality, health and safety at work as well as their environmental standards in their corporate policy, which is based on the following principles:

Total Quality, by ensuring that the processes meet the expectations of their patients and lead to excellence in our services, through:

- In-depth analysis of patient satisfaction.
- Constantly reviewing our organisational context.
- Promoting research projects.
- The proactive involvement of its staff in offering a high-quality and empathic service.

A commitment to the development of a sustainable business, through:

- The prevention of pollution.
- Protecting the environment by minimising the environmental impact of our activities.
- Efficient use of natural resources and energy.

Actively protecting the health and safety of in-house staff, our patients and society as a whole, through:

- The creation of a healthy and safe environment.
- Removing hazards and reducing risks in workplaces and facilities.
- The prevention of injuries and work-related deterioration in health.
- Encouraging the consultation and participation of staff as well as their representatives.
- Raising awareness of all external personnel accessing our facilities in order to ensure responsible and safe behaviour.

A commitment to comply with legal, regulatory and other requirements subscribed to by the clinics on a voluntary basis.

A commitment to social responsibility, by positively influencing society, through:

- The creation of jobs.
- A selfless cooperation with educational centres and research projects.
- The promotion, participation and organisation of solidarity events.
